Public Service Mutuals All round support to Spin Outs

The Government's reorganisation of a growing list of public services can mean a challenging and uncertain time for public sector staff, but also the potential for employee empowerment.

Known as Public Service Mutuals or Spin Outs, these are organisations that have left the public sector but continue delivering public services as an employee owned company, a co-operative or another form of social enterprise.

Employees play a significant role in their operation. In some cases, employees take control of the organisation and have real influence on how public services are delivered and improved.

How Wrigleys can help

Wrigleys advise on the legal aspects and work with a range of partners to collaborate on all the other areas that PSMs may need advice on.

Our legal advice includes legal structure, employee engagement through governance structures, TUPE, pensions, property and other legal aspects of the transfer.

Our aim is to help your team transition to an independent organisation that can compete for contracts and deliver services successfully.

Our all round support service can help turn your ideas into plans; the plans into action and the action into success.
