

Budget 2014 - Pensions Are Dead, Long Live Retirement Savings!

WRIGLEYS
— SOLICITORS —

Pensions Seminar 8 July 2014

The new flexibility for pensions announced in the Budget on 19 March is to be welcomed. It also has enormous ramifications for employers and employees alike in terms of how planning will need to change.

We are holding a very special free Pensions Seminar on 8 July to share with you our analysis, insights and the implications for your pension scheme and company.

So you get the most benefit from attending, BROADSTONE are collaborating with WRIGLEYS SOLICITORS so that the Seminar will cover legal aspects too.

What will the Seminar cover?

Specifically the experts will cover:

- ❖ What this means for employers in terms of reviewing the default fund of your workplace pension, how employees with small pots will be affected, and how to better educate your staff on the pension options that now face them
- ❖ What this means for individuals including the transitional rules, access to your retirement savings, and the new planning opportunities that this presents
- ❖ What does it mean for Trustees and Employers in terms of legal responsibilities, impact on documentation and communications
- ❖ How could Defined Benefit scheme members' transfer rights be affected.

The Seminar is intended to provide you with the very latest information, and practical ideas about what you need to do immediately, as well as those items that you need to be aware of and keep a watching brief on.

'Quiz the experts'

Our team will be very happy to take questions during their presentations and will also be on hand after the Seminar to give you the chance to 'quiz' them on your particular company concerns or arrangements in more detail.
